The Tramp's Flower.

'Booh! booh! And what you got there? Can't you give me a flower?'

Lumpie—that was the way her father called the chubby little girl—looked up out of the dark shadow of the vines, where her face resembled a white star. She wondered who it was that leaned over the fence and spoke to her.

'It is a big moon-face,' she said to herself, 'a lot of hair 'bout it. And, dear me, I wouldn't wear such an orful old hat. And his cose don't look very fresh and nice, one bit.'

While Lumpie was painting the stranger's portrait, he was looking up at the sky, and holding out his hand to the wind to find out the drift of the latter, and make a weather-guess. He now turned and asked again:

'Say, Sis, won't you give me a posy?'

Lumpie picked a bright nasturtium and gave it to him.

'That's a good one, and I'd rather have it than a lump of gold, Sis.'

'My papa don't call me Sis.'

'Don't he? Well, what does he say?

'Lumpie.'

'Lumpie! He beats all at namin' folks; don't he?'

'You got a papa?'

'Not that I know of. Why, Lumpie, if he were livin', he'd be as old as that tree back of you, and that would fetch the tree up to seventy years, sure.'

'You got a mamma?' continued Lumpie, as if taking the census.

'No the old woman's she's gone"—

'Old ooman?'

'My—my—mother.'

'She gone?'

'Yes.'

'Gone yare?'

'Where heaven is. Don't you know?'

'I 'spect it's up, up 'bove dat spooce tree, somevare.'

"That's where she is a singin' cherub there, these twenty years.'

'Vare's your home?'

'Home?'

The tones were sad, pitifully sad.

'Where's your home?'

'Here, vare papa and mamma are.'

'Where mother is, that's my home. I wish it was. Well, Sis—Lumpie, your flower may help me get there.'

'Move on!' suddenly called out a gruff voice. 'Don't block the sidewalk! Move on!'

In an instant, the moon face, the big lot of hair, the old hat and seedy coat which Lumpie had been looking at—all vanished, an then appeared a man wearing a blue coat and silver badge, who strutted along and wrapped on the fence with his billy in an important way. Lumpie now ran into the house and was met by Aunt Salome, who was keeping house for her brother since the beginning of his wife's sickness.

'Lumpie, whom were you talking with?'

'I dunno. He didn't have very nice cose, and hasn't a home.'

'A tramp! Horrors!'

'Tamp?'

'Yes. Sakes alike!'

'I give him a fower.'

'What kind? Not one of those beautiful dahlias?'

'A nasturtium, all yaller. Only he said 'twas gold.'

'I warrant; for that's what he is after.'

'He's a good man, 'cause he said suskin about his old mumma's home in Heaven.'

'Good? I don't want any of his goodness. Ce-phus!'

Aunt Salome had now rushed to a back kitchen window, from which she could look out upon the garden where toiled Lumpie's father, Cephas Bixby. His face no more resembled his sister's thin, wiry, nervous visage than a shingle.

'Ce-phus! Ce-phus! Why don't you hear me?'

'I hear you. What is it?'

'Who do you suppose is round?'

'Folks say I am,' and here Cephus mischievously contemplated his plump, round body.

'Now, don't plague me. Who do you s'pose has been on the garden fence?'

'A fly, I guess.'

Cephas here referred to Aunt Salome's great summer horror.

'Salome, there has been one special fly that I know for two days has been watching your screens and trying to get in. Get in! If I am ever hungry, may I not be a fly trying to get by your screens.'

'You are too bad, Cephus. It was a tramp; and I'm goin' to complain of him at the police-station.'

'Oh! let him go. I dare say the police have seen him; and in fact one went by here only five minutes ago.'

'Well, I'm goin' to make sure and enter the complaint. I know he's spotted the house, and to-night he'll break in here. There's no tellin' what he may do to you. Sakes! He may murder you.'

Cephas directed a funny look at the toes of his boots, and resumed his work.

'Where are you going when you finish here?'

'Well, I shan't go off to be a tramp while you are here. You may be sure of that. Bless me! You would have me in the station house before night.'

'Now, Cephas, tell me where you are goin' when you get through here.'

'I s'pose I must go down to Emerson's block and inspect it. I did not build it, though that is my business; but Emerson has been suspicious of the man's thoroughness who did put it up, and he wants me to step in and look 'round.'

'Don't venture where it is dangerous will you, Cephus? Get that tramp and let him go in.'

'Not I. I won't ask a man to go where I won't risk myself.

Aunt Salome muttered something about risking 'a tramp's useless life,' and then went into the house to put on her ample sun-bonnet. She told Bob, the colored servant boy, to put 'Jim' into the coupe and drive her down street.

'I would like to get some description of the tramp,' Aunt Salome reasoned to herself, 'and I've a great mind to let Bob call him out of that saloon ahead. Of course he's in there. That's where such people go. Then I can describe him to the police.

Bob alighted, and went toward the saloon door.

'Well, Bob,' said Jerry Collins, the saloon-keeper, meeting him on the doorstep, 'I see you have got Aunt Salome here. Will she take a nip?'

The saloon-keeper raised his voice in this closing clause, and roguishly winked at several thirsty customers. Aunt Salome heard it, and in disgust kept her head out of sight.

'Oh! she wants to know if a tramp has been here.'

'No. I saw, though, a trampish-looking sort of a fellow opposite here, and I thought he was going to make a call; but he swung a yellow flower in his hand, looked at that, and then moved off.'

Was Lumpie's flower guiding the homeless one homeward?

'I won't give it up. He ought to be here,' said Aunt Salome, as they neared a gambling saloon, knowing very well he ought not to be there.

'Tramp been here?' replied the proprietor to the inquiring Bob. 'Well, no; yes. A big rough heathen came to my door, twirling a yellow flower; but he turned away and I lost sight of him.'

Was the flower still guiding?

'What shall I do?' exclaimed Aunt Salome. 'I can't report his looks as I would like to the police, and yet I must have them jest watch our house. Land! What is that noise? Bob, what is it?'

'Awful, marm, wasn't it? Hebben and arth gib way den? Fearful noise! See dose folks runnin'!'

'What can it be?' screamed Aunt Salome. 'Do you know, mister?'

The man she was hailing stopped in the midst of a vigorous run, and bawled out:

'They say it's Emerson's block that has tumbled.'

The man had no second edition of news to give her, but rushed on headlong.

'O Ce-phus, you there?' shrieked Aunt Salome. 'Drive on, Bob!'

And Bob drove till they came to the ruins, one mass of fallen chimney, walls, floors, roofs. There was a dense black crowd around the spot. Several of the people, seeing Aunt Salome, rushed to the carriage.

'He is safe, marm. He's all right.'

'Ce-phus is?'

'Yes; we have him in the 'pothecary-store; but he had a narrow escape,' said a man. 'I saw the whole of it. You see this building was not put up right, and everybody thought it crazy, and Emerson wanted your brother to examine the thing. People thought they saw the end wall bulgin' out and advised him not to go; but down into the cellar he went. While he was there the end tumbled, and then we heard a big cry for help from the cellar. You see it was Cephas caught under a timber. But you must not wonder if no man dared go down there; for people were callin' out: 'Tother end is bulgin' out!' At last there came along a big, strong moose-sort of a feller, a rough-lookin' customer that nobody knew, and he jest whisked down that cellar quickly; and in about as short a time as I am telling this story, he got to your brother and then passed him out to us through a cellar window. By the time we'd crossed the street with Cephus——'

'Then Ce-phus is hurt?' interposed Aunt Salome.

'No, he was kinder scratched, but really he won't need even a plaster.'

'And that man?'

'Well, as I was sayin', we had crossed the street with Cephus and all there was left of the building tumbled! 'Twas awful!'

'And buried that man underneath?'

'That's where he is, I'm sorry to say; under that pile the people are tryin' to turn over; for they think they can fetch him out pretty quick, guessin' about where he is.'

The next moment Aunt Salome was out of the carriage. In spite of a lot of nerves, she had a lot of sense and heart in her old, thin body, and she went off at once to get things that she knew would be helpful to the poor fellow, if taken from the ruins alive. Soon there was a shout.

'They've got him!' bawled a spectator.

'Take him to the 'pothecary's!' called out Aunt Salome.

There they took him, and he was laid beside Cephus. The latter was sore and weak, but Aunt Salome's informant was right in saying he would not need even a plaster. His lifeless rescuer, though, was so bruised and battered, so mutilated and so covered with blood and dust, that he was not recognized. When his face had been washed by Aunt Salome, then, even, no one knew him.

'Who can it be?' inquired the bystanders.

'I know,' said Aunt Salome. She had pulled out of the dead man's pocket a crushed little yellow flower.

Aunt Salome was not given to dreams.

'Weak, vain, superstitious!' she called them. However, that night, after questioning Lumpie about the flower, and learning much that the tramp had said, a dream came to her. She seemed to see a valley shrouded in darkness, but beyond it glowed the walls of a Golden City. And treading the darkened way, she saw the tramp bearing the yellow flower in his hand. The flower shone with the brilliancy of the city beyond; and it was toward that city his face was turned.—Independent.

A FIENDISH WOMAN.

Barbarious Treatment By a Foster Mother.

A Little Boy Subjected to the Most Outrageous and Inhuman Cruelties—The Husband Afraid to Interfere.

DETROIT, Mich., July 22.—Colonel T. C. Hudson is a well-known Detroiter. He is entry clerk in the Custom House here, and lives with his wife in good style at No. 140 Locust street. A tremendous sensation was caused yesterday by the application of a neighbor named Mrs. J. J. England to the Probate Court to appoint C. M. Stocking guardian of Clarence, the 5-year-old foster child of Colonel and Mrs Hudson. Mr. Stocking is the agent of the Humane Society, and the proceedings were taken on the advice of the society. Mrs. Hudson is charged with the most inhuman treatment of the child.

The story of her brutality is a narrative that would be incredible if not proved by the testimony of a former domestic in the Hudson family and other eye-witnesses, including Mr. Hudson himself, who seemed utterly unable to prevent it. He declared yesterday that the "pure devilishness" of his wife rendered it impossible for him to interfere with her torture of the lad.

One of her favorite modes of punishment, the domestic says, was to double him up, with his head between his legs, tie him in that position, place him in the bath-tub and then turn the water on him. If he kicked or squirmed she would take him out and beat him until his back was black and blue. Another method of punishment was to tie his hands behind his head and place him in a dark cellar, where she would keep him for hours at a time. If the boy told Mr. Hudson when he came home of what had occurred Mrs. Hudson would give him a worse punishment the next day. The boy was on several different occasions made to stand in the corner of the room with his face pushed up against the wall for hours at a time. Mrs. Hudson would sit where she could see him, and every once in a while would call out, 'Push harder; I can tell when you are not pressing hard,' and the suffering child would push so hard that his nose would be almost flattened out. Another method of torture was to make the boy bite his own tongue, and Mrs. Hudson would compel him to do this until his tongue would swell up double its natural size. On one occasion the little fellow was asleep in bed, and Mrs. Hudson went to his room and told him that she was the devil and had come to kill him. 'All right,' replied the boy.

Often she made him stand up in front of her for hours at a time when she was at work. On one occasion, after he had stood there for two or three hours, she said, 'You hate me. Don't you?'

'No, mamma,' replied the boy.

'That's a lie,' screamed the woman, 'and I will whip you for it,' and then she gave him a terrible beating with a piece of barrel stave that she kept for that purpose. The boy made no outcry. In fact, he never whimpered or cried when she was inflicting the severest kind of punishment upon him. At another time Mrs. Hudson put the boy's plate on the floor and made him get down on his hands and knees and eat from it like a dog. He said, 'Mamma, can't I take some of it in my fingers?'

'No,' she replied. 'Eat it down; you're no better than a dog; you little wretch.'

Mr. Hudson said his wife was in the habit of putting oil on the child's bruises so as to prevent them from becoming too conspicuous. Hudson says that since the child has been with them he has bought not less than fifty bottles of oil for this purpose.

Colonel Hudson is now and has been for many years employed in the Custom House as an entry clerk. Although past middle age, he is still a handsome man, with silky moustache and dark hair hanging in glossy curls. He likes a good cigar and a good story, but as a rule his face wears a sad, careworn look. Mrs. Hudson is now in Chicago visiting relatives and the child is with her. Mr. Stocking, as soon as appointed guardian, will go after the boy. Hudson appears to be frightened of his life at the woman, and is much relieved that the authorities have finally taken action. The affair is the town talk.

Innocent Childhood.

'Tain't so,' triumphantly exclaimed Bobbie from his perch on top of a chair gazing down on Algernon's head.

'What is not true,' doubtfully asked his sister Maud.

'Why, you said Algy was so green that grass was growing from the top of his head, and (determinedly) there ain't any here.'

How Maud explained the situation is unknown.—Detroit Free Press.

Settled It.

Grandpa was telling about some one who was very heavy for his size, and he said: 'He is the biggest man I ever saw for his size.'

At this all smiled, so he tried it again.

'I mean he is the heaviest person for his weight I ever knew.' Then, after a pause, 'What are you all laughing at?' and grandpa walked off in indignation.

IT WENT ROUND AMONG THE NEIGHBORS.—Mr. Levi Stahl, merchant and postmaster at Fostoria, Pa., writes:

'Mr. J. A. McDonald, Reedsville, Pa.

DEAR SIR:—Some time ago I had a severe attack of chronic diarrhoea. Could obtain no relief. A friend gave me a part of a bottle of your Cutis' Carmelite Cordial, and a few doses entirely cured me. The balance of the bottle went around among the neighbors. Since then I have written to New York and Philadelphia for the medicine but could not procure it. I traced up the bottle we had and found it was purchased of Mr. Jacob Cowan, merchant in Altoona, and from him obtained your address. Please forward me one dozen bottles by express at once, as I do not wish to be without it in my family and wish to sell it in my store.'

Single bottle Curtis' Carmelite Cordial guaranteed to cure any case of cholera, dysentery, diarrhoea, cramps, pains and all iritation of the bowels incident to change of climate, diet and water.

JACOB.

TWO WOMEN AND A HORSE.

It is now nearly three weeks since we took a horse to keep. The family to whom he belonged were going to spend the summer in Europe. We knew the Fletchers slightly. They called on us to see if we would entertain Jacob, their faithful steed. They said they knew if we had him they should rest easy; and they knew that our horse was lame now, and perhaps we might like to use Jacob for his keep. Afterwards we found out that though the Fletchers might rest easy, we could not. We thought well of this proposition. We decided we would have Kentucky's shoes taken off and put her in our pasture back of the barn.

When these people drove over from the town where they live, they did not drive their own horse, but came with a neighbor. It happened that we had never seen the horse that we were to take until he came on the day his family left for New York to take the steamer. A man in a very narrow open buggy drove into our yard. Hitched to his wagon behind him was an iron-gray horse so tall that it made one gasp to look at him. It was not that he was so very heavy, but that his legs and neck were so long. Now we know enough to be aware that it is not a good sign to "see too much daylight under a horse." One could see half the firmament under Jacob.

The old man grinned as he said he guessed this was the old Barton place. We said it was.

'Well,' he responded, jumping down from his seat and beginning to untie the halter which was fastened to the rear of his buggy. 'Wall, I've brought ye this 'ere railroad bridge, ye see.'

My sister and I both stood with our heads thrown back, gazing. I immediately suggested that it might be well to lead the horse home again. I didn't believe we could take care of him, and my sister added that we had had no experience in the wants of a dromedary, or even of a giraffe. The man grinned still more.

'Can't take him back,' he said; 'his folks have gone. Hadn't ye ever seen this critter before?'

'Never.'

Then he laughed, and laughed so long that we began to be angry. Jacob, meanwhile, had begun to graze. I saw he had kind eyes; there was no vicious appearance about him. My sister remarked that if she had money enough to travel in Europe she thought she should afford to sell Jacob, where upon the man went off into another laugh, and I asked sternly how many tricks he had. As soon as possible I was told that he hadn't any tricks; he was a perfect horse, so far as he knew. The Fletchers set such store by him they wouldn't sell him at no price, and they thought we women folks would appreciate him.

Having said this with great solemnity and emphasis, he put the end of the halter into my hand, placed his foot on the hub of the wheel, and sprang over into his buggy. As he drove away we saw him swaying with laughter, and he kept looking behind at the group he had left.

It was a good while before either of us spoke. Our Gordon setter now walked up from somewhere, glanced at us, and walked away again, as if washing his hands of this affair.

'I guess we'll put him into the barn,' I said cheerfully after a while. 'You go in and turn Kentucky out.'

Gertrude did as she was told. In a moment I saw our horse walk out of the west door into the pasture. She had a loose box, and it was into this that I now led Jacob. The box was not the largest kind, but it was roomy enough for Kentucky to turn round in, and she was a good-sized animal. It never occurred to us that this apartment was not large enough for any horse, or if it was not, that any horse of sense would try to turn round in it.

We closed the door and stood a moment, asking each other what we were going to do. We said we hated the Fletchers. We said we hoped they would drown; but we withdrew that wish for two reasons; first, because if they drowned we should have to keep Jacob forever; secondly, because the wish was wicked.

As we walked toward the house we heard a great noise of hoofs, and then an ominous stillness, in which we fancied was a kind of choking sound. We ran back and flung open the box door. There was Jacob describing a curve across the room, his hind-quarters being one end and his head the other, both extremities being pressed so hard against either partition that he was curved nearly into a half circle, and appeared to be smothering, so twisted was his neck.

'Run for a man!' I cried out, looking wildly round for something, I knew not what.

My sister started, while I recklessly caught up a whip and went at the horse, flourishing it across his back. He made a tremendous movement and curved up still more; so much so that he released himself and stood head toward me.

I ran after Gertrude and told her to come back, that we did not want a man; the horse had turned round. She did not hear at first, and I screamed still louder that we did not want any man. Now she heard, and turned, walking with great slowness and dignity toward me. Something in her aspect made me look about, and I saw a gentleman within a few feet of me. He did not attempt to disguise his merriment. He said it did not appear to be a good time for him to call, and he would go on. He was not urged to stay, but he was invited to call some other time and see the horse that we had taken to keep.

As soon as possible we hurried into the barn and found Jacob with his head in the meal barrel. We pulled him out and decided that he could not be loose in his box, so we tied him to the manger just as if he had been in a stall. He was all right now. It being sunset, we placed hay and oats before him and left him.

The night passed quietly. When I went to the barn in the morning I saw plainly that I had not fed the horse enough. He had eaten everything I had given him, all the bedding, and about one-half of the manger, which was made of thick pine plank. Also a shallow hole was gnawed out in the partition. I hastened to give him his breakfast, and I gave him in my anxiety three times as much as the usual quantity. I told my sister what I had discovered, and she informed me that we should have to have our stable and eating-box lined throughout with zinc, for it was not because Jacob was hungry, it was because he was a "cribber" that he had done this thing.

She proved to be right. In less than a week we had the zinc put on, and only barely in time then to save the walls and foundation. I watched the horse once; I saw him take hold of the wood and pull and grunt. He was lost and bewildered when he could not do that. I think it was for lack of this occupation that he got into trouble the very first night after his dwelling was repaired. We were awakened about midnight by a noise which at first we could not place; but of course as we had had no real freedom since Jacob had come, we immediately thought he was the cause of it. We dressed hurriedly, lighted the lantern and went out into the summer night, which was full of sweet odors and the hum of insects. A whippoorwill was singing on the grindstone under the cherry tree as we opened the back door.

When we reached the stall our hearts sank. There was the horse sprawled out, with yards and yards of hind legs on the floor behind him. He was not struggling now, he was lying perfectly still, his head on its side. Although we had never seen a horse like this before, we were sure that he was in a fit.

I ran to our nearest neighbor. I ruthlessly pounded and called until he came to the window, when I informed him that the gray horse was in a fit, and would he come right up? He said he would, and I ran back, being perfectly breathless and helpless when I reached home.

Gertrude was sitting on a stool behind the horse, looking at him. He lay just the same.

'He is coming,' I said, and sank down on the meal chest.

'I wouldn't run myself to death,' she said. 'I don't know that it is required of us that we give our lives for this horse, though his family are in Europe. I wish they were here with us, gazing at their pet.'

The man came. He said the horse was not in a fit. He was well enough; he was only cast.

'Only cast!' cried my sister. 'What more would you have? How long does a horse stay cast?'

'What you want is a good plank,' said our neighbor.

We found a good plank. He laid one end of it over Jacob's hind legs, and there was ample opportunity so to do; then he directed Gertrude and me to get on the plank and stand firmly, while he went in the stall. We did not see what he did, we were too much occupied with what we were doing, for we obeyed him.

Immediately there was a movement, a lurch, an upheaval. The legs were drawn up, and we flew off across the barn. Gertrude's nose began to bleed, but I only sustained general bruises, which I counted as nothing. The horse was standing.

'I guess he's all right now," says our friend. 'I'll hitch him up so high he can't get his head down; if he can't do that he can't lie down. I guess he tried to roll. Better put him in a narrerer stall. Too much room. Horses don't try to roll in narrer stalls.'

When daylight came we harnessed our own horse and went for a carpenter to make a narrer stall. But we never used it after it was made more than half a dozen times. We turned Jacob out to pasture and drove Kentucky, lame though she was. The reason why we did this was because to harness Jacob was more than we were able to do often.

At our first attempt he got away from us six times as we tried to put his bridle on. The instant we slipped off his headstall he flung up his head even higher than usual, mountain high it seemed to us, and went out of doors if he could, or back into his stall. One of us led him out, the other stood on a chair with the bridle in complete readiness to put on his head. No, his teeth were shut hard, and his head was, so far as we were concerned, miles off. Only those who have tried it on a hot summer day know how exasperated and how helpless we were. But we did succeed. Then we went into the house and rested. When we came out the sight of that beast attached to a low phaeton made us feel that our labor was thrown away. He looked higher than ever; he was monstrous. He would have looked tall in a T-cart or an omnibus. When we sat down and I took the reins, they came to me from such a height, and descended so far before they reached the little dash-board, that I was ashamed.

I think we had sufficient reason for putting Jacob to pasture. He tumbles down walls and fences, but we are in comparative peace. When Mrs. Fletcher reached Liverpool she wrote that she hoped we were enjoying that dear horse, and she knew we should be kind to him. She felt perfectly easy about him.—N. Y. Tribune.

Announcement.

R. A. BUMILLER, ESQ., EDITOR MILLHEIM JOURNAL.—Dear Sir: Some parties are circulating the report that I am not a candidate for Prothonotary. Now I desire to say to the Democrats of Centre County, that I am a candidate in earnest, and want to make the nomination if I can do so honorably, and hope the people will give my case fair consideration with the rest.

Respectfully Yours,
AARON WILLIAMS.

IT is believed that the final adjournment of Congress will occur about Monday or Tuesday of next week.

THE latest news dated July 27th states that editor Cutting has been liberated and the Mexicans will have to give up thinking of war.

HUBERT O. THOMPSON, the well-known leader of the County Democracy of New York, and considered a politician of much ability and force, died suddenly on Monday morning, the 26th instant, of apoplexy.

COUNTY CHAIRMAN HOY publishes in this issue the rules for the delegate election, with the list of persons who are to hold said election in their respective districts. Democratic voters should read the same and be governed accordingly at the coming election. It is always essential to a successful campaign to do the work pertaining to it as intelligently as possible.

THE name of Hon. Leonard Rhone appears among the announcements this week. He is a candidate for renomination as assemblyman and stands exactly upon the same footing with his colleague, Hon. J. A. Woodward. His excellent qualifications for the office are sufficiently known to secure for him the hearty support of the party at the approaching convention.

IT may be of interest and importance to the public to learn that the law in all cases is on the side of the pedestrian. Few teamsters and drivers seem to be aware of this fact, else they would not compel people who may cross the street to wait until their horses and wagons have passed, while they are actually obliged by law to pay attention to the crossings and allow pedestrians to cross first.

HON. P. GRAY MEEK, the editor of the Bellefonte Watchman, announces himself as a candidate for the Senate in this issue. Mr. Meek is well-known all over the county and state as one of the most zealous and faithful democratic workers, a man who always stood firm by his party and its principles, and never flinched to advocate the best means for the good of the democracy through the columns of his wide-spread paper. His claims upon the support of democratic voters are not of trifling nature and will doubtless receive due consideration.

HON. John A. Woodward, one of our worthy representatives in the state legislature, announces himself in this issue as a candidate for renomination as member of assembly. We do not think Mr. Woodward should or will have any opposition for said office, first because it is customary in Centre county to give members of the legislature two terms and secondly because the gentleman has the fitness and courage to represent his constituents in a faithful and unflinching manner Whenever a case can not well be bettered, then "good enough should be left alone."

DEMOCRATS in instructing their delegates for Congress should by all means throw their influence and support to J. L. Spangler, the only candidate for that office in this county. Gov Curtin has positively declined to have his name used in any wise or manner and the democratic voters of Centre county are therefore in duty bound to give Mr. Spangler their support. There is certainly no use in leaving the county open for a canvass by neighboring candidates, and by voting for Spangler the county democracy will not cast its ballots for an undeserving candidate.

THE republican ticket seems to have been sent away for repairs. General Beaver rusticates in California, and Quay is on a furlough and off for Mexico. Quay's parting instructions to Beaver are said to have been: "Dear Beaver, don't talk, and don't come back until September." Col. Norris talked too fast at Gettysburg and he was shipped somewhere not a thousand miles from this place. Likely they will bottle up the rest of the ticket and make it swim down the Niagara Falls, a la Graham before the summer is past. The worst of it is, the whole Beaver ticket stands an even chance to take a trip upSaltRiver about the third of November.

A Point in Favor of Change.

The report of the year's business of the Internal Revenue Bureau is the best evidence yet presented in favor of a change in the political completion of the agents in the administration of the government. No other branch of the government has been so completely changed. Not only the head but nearly all the subordinates left by the Republican administration have been removed and Democrats put in their places. The result cannot fail to strike the average mind with favor.

According to the report the collections for the year just closed were $116,902,845, an increase over the previous year of $4,481,724. Changes in the laws operated to decrease the collections a matter of $50,000, but notwithstanding this fact the aggregate shows the increase indicated. The cost of collection was not increased in proportion to the increase in receipts. On the contrary a reduction of expenses to the aggregate of $155,000 is shown, thus demonstrating that the improvement is attributable to greater efficiency or greater integrity.

When the Treasury Department changed hands the boast was made that the accounts balanced, and credit was ostentatiously claimed for the honesty of the Republican officials then shown. But how is the differences developed in this department to be accounted for without bringing the integrity of the officers into question? The increase in receipts and reduction of expenses in one bureau makes a gain to the Treasury of $4,636,724. Was that amount stolen by the Republican officials, or was it allowed to be wasted by carelessness in handling or inefficiency on the part of the agents of the Government?—Patriot.

Miscellaneous News.

Fire at the Dubois Mill.

DUBOIS, Pa., July 26.—About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a destructive fire broke out in the engine room of John E. Dubois' big mill. The hook and ladder and hose companies were soon on the ground and got the flames under control, and what might have been a $300,000 fire was averted. The loss is $3,000.

McMeen Denied a New Trial.

MIFFLINTOWN, Pa., July 27.—Judge Barnett to-day overruled the motion asking for a new trial in the case of the Commonwealth vs. William Josiah McMeen charged and convicted of murder in the first degree at the April term of court. The Judge sentenced the prisoner "to be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may God have mercy on your soul." The decision gives universal satisfaction. The case will be appealed to the Supreme Court.

A Tramp Run Over at Sunbury.

SUNBURY, July 25.—About 4:30 yesterday morning a tramp giving his name as Frederick Nemy, aged about 14 years and belonging to Wilkesbarre, after sleeping in the Philadelphia and Erie round house, attempted to board a moving coal train and was thrown under the wheels of a car. His right arm was mashed from his shoulder down and his right leg greatly bruised and lacerated. He was taken to the office of the company's physician and the arm amputated, after which he was removed to the poor-house and his friends notified. He claimed that his stepfather had chased him from home. His person was very filthy.

Foreigners Rioting.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., July 26.—A serious riot broke out between two gangs of Italian and Hungarian laborers on the new Pennsylvania and Schuylkill Valley Railroad, between Delano and Hazleton, this afternoon. The Italians struck for an advance in wages, and undertook to compel the Hungarians to strike with them. The latter refused, and a terrible fight, in which nearly 400 men participated, followed. A train was immediately dispatched to this place for policemen to stop the fight, but before they reached the scene the Italians had driven the Hungarians to the woods and had stopped all work on the line. Several of the Italians are badly injured, and four of the number are reported dying.

Is it Cholera?

Many People in Newark Afflicted with a Disease Akin to the Fest.

NEWARK, N. J., July 26.—If the eighth ward of this city is not afflicted with genuine cholera, it is afflicted with something marvelously like it. People for a block or two on Fifth street have been taken with violent dysentery, accompanied with hemorrhages, during the past 48 hours. One death occurred this morning in the person of a Mrs. Bennett. She was only sick 24 hours. The physicians are thoroughly alarmed and are busy holding consultations and doing all they can to relieve the suffering. Further deaths are expected by to-night. It is impossible to ascertain the cause of the trouble, although it is believed the water in the block has much to do with it. People in the vicinity are said to be terribly frightened.

LAY THEM AWAY.—We mean the horrible, nauseous worm-seed compounds called worm syrups and vermifuges; many of them as worthless as they are obnoxious. They have out-lived their usefulness. People do not want them since McDonald's Celebrated Worm Powders, so easy and pleasant to take, can be had from any dealer Everyone who has tried them say they are the nicest and best vermifuges ever discovered. The children take them and never know a medicine is being administered. Any case of failure to cause explosion where worms exist the money promptly refunded in every instance.

Mexican Affairs and Warlike News.

EL PASO, Tex., July 25.—The excitement on both sides of the river among the Mexicans as well as the Americans, has been so great that both governments have concluded for the purpose of allaying it, to conduct further negotiations secretly and without publicity. For that reason consul Brigham had no further official advices yesterday on the all absorbing subject of the Cutting imprisonment. Editor Cutting was brought before Judge Casteneda last evening, and informed that his case had become of such national importance that it would have to be transferred to the First district court, where sentence would be pronounced at some future day. Counsel Brigham tried to learn when the trial would take place, but could get no satisfaction. It is now thought that Mexico is determined not to give Cutting up. It is rumored on the streets of Paso del Norte that a train-load of Mexican troops with a park of artillery is approaching the city from Chihuahua. The situation continues to look very serious, Meanwhile soldiers continue in large numbers in Paso del Norte, Mexico.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., July 25.—There is considerable bustle about military headquarters here, and although the officers are reticent the report is current that General Stanley has received orders to have all of his available force in readiness to move at a moment's notice at El Paso whenever the order therefor is received. The gathering of the Mexican war cloud is watched with a great deal of interest and but one opinion prevails—that the Mexican government should be taught that it can not treat American citizens with indignity.

No Troops Ordered to Fort Bliss,

WASHINGTON, July 25.—It is stated at the War Department to-day that no United States troops have been ordered to Fort Bliss in anticipation of trouble at Paso del Norte arising from the repeated refusal of the Mexican authorities to release Editor Cutting. It is said further that the concentration of Mexican troops at that place does not in itself signify a probable rupture of the present peaceful relations with this country, but it is more likely a strategic military movement against the revolutionary parties in Mexico.

The exercises of the day will consist of addresses by able speakers, choice music by the Millheim and Green Burr bands and various games of amusement. A good dinner will be furnished for 25 cents. Ice Cream, Lemonade, Confectioneries and other refreshments will be on the ground. The programme for the day is calculated to entertain everybody in a pleasant manner. Come one! Come all!

G. W. WINTERS,
President.
G. WEBER,
Secretary.

—The gentleman with whom we had the pleasuae to ride to Aaronsburg last Sunday evening to attend Lutheran church, was real indignant when after services as he went to fetch his conveyance from the shed, he found that some undisciplined scoundrel had made it his business to let down every curtain of the carriage and do it in such a rude way as to tear the straps with which the curtains were fastened. Now we really blush for Aaronsburg, that quiet, staid town; contemptible tricks like that we don't hear of in Millheim. But we forget that Aaronsburg is no borough and is therefor deprived of the benefits of councils and high constables to look after the roughs.

AARONSBURG CENTENNIAL CHURCH FESTIVAL.—The ladies of the Lutheran congregation of Aaronsburg have, for several reasons, thought it best to change the time of their Centennial Church Festival from the 14th of Aug. to the 7th, one week earlier than published in the JOURNAL of last week. They are also now prepared to say that the festival will assume the character of olden times, and, so far as possible, will be made to look like 100 years ago. No trouble nor pains will be spared to show our profound respect for this venerable burg of our ancestors. The festival promises to be interesting to both young and old. The Millheim band will be in attendance. The festival, as before published, will be held on the lawn near the Lutheran church. All are invited to attend. Remember the time is a week from Saturday.

IT WENT ROUND AMONG THE NEIGHBORS.—Mr. Levi Stahl, merchant and postmaster at Fostoria, Pa., writes:

'Mr. J. A. McDonald, Reedsville, Pa.

DEAR SIR:—Some time ago I had a severe attack of chronic diarrhoea. Could obtain no relief. A friend gave me a part of a bottle of your Cutis' Carmelite Cordial, and a few doses entirely cured me. The balance of the bottle went around among the neighbors. Since then I have written to New York and Philadelphia for the medicine but could not procure it. I traced up the bottle we had and found it was purchased of Mr. Jacob Cowan, merchant in Altoona, and from him obtained your address. Please forward me one dozen bottles by express at once, as I do not wish to be without it in my family and wish to sell it in my store.'

Single bottle Curtis' Carmelite Cordial guaranteed to cure any case of cholera, dysentery, diarrhoea, cramps, pains and all iritation of the bowels incident to change of climate, diet and water.

—Rev. John Tomlimson, the former pastor of the Aaronsburg Lutheran charge, but now of Abbottstown, Adams Co., arrived in Friday morning's train, pursuant to a call to preach Mrs. Ettinger's funeral sermon. He tarried among his many friends in this town and Aaronsburg until Tuesday morning, when he returned home. Rev. Tomlinson is a distinguished veteran in the Gospel service and we are free to say that nearly all of his former flock in this vicinity were truly glad to see him in their midst.

I. O. OF GOOD TEMPLARS.—Mr. C. Dinges, Clem Deininger and others, of Centre Hall, were down on Monday for the purpose of starting a Good Templar Lodge in this place. A meeting was held in the Ev. church in the evening which was fairly attended and resulted in the organization of the Lodge: The following were elected officers: H. K. Luse. C. T.. Mrs. J.F. Harter, V. T., D. L. Zerby, Sec., J. H. B. Hartman, Treas., Geo. Buck, Fin. Sec., H. D. Snyder, Marshall, Mrs. S. D. Musser, Ass. Sec., E. E. Bressler, Sentinel, Mrs. J. W. Lose, Guard, Mrs. A. Walter, R. H. S., Mrs. D. Zerby, L. H. S., S. D. Miller, D. M., A. Walter, Lodge Dep., J. F. Harter, P. C. T. Much interest was manifested in the movement and another meeting was appointed for next Monday evening, when all those who wish to join will have an opportunity to become charter members.

—Mr. J. B. Hooveman, of whose protracted illness the JOURNAL had made frequent mention, died at his residence on Main street, on last Thursday, the 22nd instant, at the age of 27 years, 6 months and 25 days. Deceased was a native of Lewisburg, Pa., but has been residing in Millheim for the past few years, during which time he was an invalid and unable to work. Mr. Hooveman, in former years, was employed on the L. & T. railroad and had many friends among his fellow employes, by whom he was regarded as a very obliging and pleasant young man. The funeral services were held at the residence of the deceased on Saturday forenoon by Rev. C. W. Wasson, after which the remains were taken to Lewisburg for burial. He leaves a wife and a two-year old little girl, as well as many relatives and friends to mourn his death. But their loss is his eternal gain, as his end was peace. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones.

OBITUARY.—Died at Aaronsburg, Centre county, Pa., on Tuesday evening, July 20th, 1886, Elizabeth, wife of Emanuel Ettinger, aged 82 years, 8 months and 20 days.

In the death of this excellent and venerable lady the community in which she passed all the days of her protracted life and of which she was so estimable a member has sustained a loss which will long be felt. She will be sorely missed in her loving home circle, in the church whose membership she adorned, and by her many friends and neighbors in her native village.

Mrs. Ettinger, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Beuck, was born in the town of Aaronsburg, on the 31st day of October, in the year 1803, and never resided elsewhere. She was the fourth child of John Mathias Beuck, a native of Hamburg, Germany, who came to America when a young man, settled at Aaronsburg about the year 1797, and was well known in his day as one of the most intelligent and useful citizens of Penns Valley. In early life she united with the Evangelical Lutheran Church. Until prevented by the infirmities of age and disease she was one of its most active and zealous members, and she continued to the hour of death a sincere and consistent christian woman, both in profession and example. She was ever anxious for the welfare of others—always unselfish and generous. One beautiful trait of her character was the kind solicitude she showed for the needs of the sick, the suffering and the poor. To these her heart and hand were always open, adorning her life work with sweet deeds of kindness and charity.

She was joined in marriage with Emanuel Ettinger on the 6th day of April, 1824, and thus for over sixty-two years they journeyed along the pathway of life together. She was the mother of nine children. Her aged husband and four daughters remain to mourn a grievous bereavement. She was a devoted and faithful wife—a fond and careful mother. The daughters who survive her are Mrs. William H. Stover, of Aaronsburg, Mrs. R. H. Forster, of Harrisburg, Mrs. J. G. Kurtz, of Milton and Mrs. L. D. Kurtz, of Mifflinburg. Though she lived to a ripe age, all profoundly mourn her departure, but it is not as those who sorrow without hope. Her good life and her never doubting and sublime faith in the truths and promises of the Christian religion give positive assurance that "all is well" with her in death. *

Prof. M. O. Noll closed his school on last Monday for the want of a sufficient number of scholars, and returned to his home at Lewisburg, Pa.

Luther E. Stover, who was quite low with typhoid fever, has regained sufficient strength to sit on a chair a few hours each day. His present condition is prospective to a speedy recovery.

We would suggest that the church councils who have in charge our several burial grounds, see that all stone piles and other rubbish be removed at once from the grounds in question. Do please be more urgent in this matter.

On account of Rev. Deitzler's illness Rev. Jno. Tomlinson, of Abbottstown, Pa., former pastor of this (Luth.) charge was called to conduct the services at the burial of Mrs. Em'l. Ettinger, dec'd., on last Friday. On the following Sunday evening he preached to a large and attentive audience.

We are sorry to hear of the sickness of Mrs. Dr. E. J. Deshler. Mr. and Mrs. Deshler left Iowa for their Pennsylvania hame several weeks ago. While visiting friends in Ohio, Mrs. Deshler took sick. As was reported, she was at one time not able to leave her bed, although of late she has been improving. Their arrival home is daily expected by their friends.

COBURN.

Huckleberries are very plenty and the market here is overstocked, selling at four cents a quart.

The first new wheat was brought in yesterday (Monday) by Jacob Gephart and purchased by Whitmer & Lincoln.

On Thursday evening last the news was received here of the death of James Hooveman, who had been a sufferer for several months. A subscription was circulated around among the railroaders and others and quite a nice purse was raised for paying the funeral expenses. He was burried in Lewisburg Saturday evening.

Our farmers are at present engaged in harvesting their barley crop, which is good.

One day last week while Ad. Wolf was taking a pleasure ride his horse took fright and ran away. A smashed up sulky wheel was the result.

Geo. Crouse who was down with typhoid fever, I am glad to mention, is able to be about again.

The select school which Prof. Gramley is teaching in our town is largely attended.

The band picnic which will be held in a grove near town next Saturday, we hope will be a success. An invitation to come and participate in the pleasures of the day is extended to all. Three visiting bands will be on the ground.

Guiswite & Co. have employed an extra set of men and now run their saw mill day and night.

Huckleberries seem to be plenty in the mountains south of Wolf's Store. Many of our farmers are laying in a large supply of the berries. They sell here at 3 cts. per quart.

Last week our supervisor passed through this section and notified all owners of land to cut down and keep Canada thistle from going to seed. This is a step in the right direction as this pestilential weed is fast gaining the upper hand on some farms in this valley.

Frank Snyder has accepted the job on Guiswite's saw mill to run the edger, a position which Frank can well fill.

Miscellaneous News.

Cheering News for Watsontown.

WATSONTOWN, Pa., July 21—The car works at this place have received a contract from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, to build for them 200 high sided hopper bottom gondola cars. There is a flattering prospect for another large order. This will stir up business in Watsontown.

Thought it was the Panther.

EASTOM, Pa., July 21.—William Durkin, a tramp who is well-known te every employe of the Lehigh Valley Railroad from Perth Amboy to Hazelton, was fatally wounded last evening at the water tank near the Hazle Creek Bridge. Night Watchman Derr heard a noise in the woods, and believing it to be one of the numerous panthers that have been frightening people along the railroad went to his residence, procured a revolver and fired in the direction of the supposed panther. After firing a second round a human cry was heard. Derr proceeded to the spot and found Durkin bleeding from two wounds, one on the head and another in the body. He was removed to Weatherly in a dying condition, and afterward to the County Hospital at Laurytown. Derr surrendered to the authorities.

Nearly Smothered in a Pillow-Slip.

READING, Pa., July 21.—Booke Harrison, aged 19 years, son of J. A. Harrison, No. 422 Pine street, this city, was nearly smothered to death this morning. The young man retired as usual last evening, but failed to come down stairs as he was called repeatedly. This proved unavailing, and a member of the family went to his room and found his head accidentally enveloped in a pillow-slip. The young man was already unconscious, and if it had not been for the timely discovery the result might have been fatal. Mr. Harrison is still very weak, but is regarded as out of danger.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Two Children Roasted Alive in a Burning Building.

ELIZABETHTOWN, Pa., July 22.—The frame house of Rudolph Roat, at Conewago station, two miles west of here, where the Colebrook Valley Railroad connects with the Pennsylvania, took fire last night from a defective flue. Before it was discovered the building was in flames, and it was impossible to save it or to rescue all the inmates. Two of Mr. Roat's children, aged 6 and 7 respectively, were burned to death; the building was entirely destroyed. Mrs. Roat was awakened at about 9 o'clock by the light shining in her face, and she at once awoke her husband. The woman grasped her infant from its crib and jumped from the window. The oldest daughter was awakened by the heat and going to another bed, where a little sister and a brother were sleeping, tried to arouse them, but was horrified to find them dead, having been suffocated by smoke. She then jumped from the window to save her life. The father tried hard to rescue the two children, but was driven back by the smoke and heat, and to save his own life he left the burning building. The house was one and one half stories high, built of logs and weather-boarded, and was burned to the ground in a very short time. The mother is almost prostrated with grief, and it is feared she will become deranged. The father is also grieved at the loss of his two children. The mother, father and two children escaped in an almost naked condition, as all clothing was burned. They were taken to the residence of Mr. Krauser, manager of the Grubb estate, at which place Mr. Roat was employed, and were given clothing.
